1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. § 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless --

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Subject matter developed by another person, which qualifies as prior art only under subsection (f) or (g) of section 102 of this title, shall not preclude patentability under this section where the subject matter and the claimed invention were, at the time the invention was made, owned by the same person or subject to an obligation of assignment to the same person.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. § 103, the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 C.F.R. § 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of potential 35 U.S.C. § 102(f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. § 103.

3. Claims 1, 7, 10, 12-15, 21, and 24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 102(b) as being anticipated by Hatamura. Figure 4 of Hatamura shows the basic claimed pin which detects force components along two perpendicular axes, see column 8, lines 33-36. Hatamura also teaches the placement of one of these pins at the boom pivot (116) and another at boom lift cylinder pivot (117), see figure 17. Hatamura uses the measured stability to control the driving components, see column 13, lines 65 and 66, which states that the embodiment of figure 17 is controlled similar to the embodiment of figure 15 (which is detailed in column 13, lines 51-54).

4. Claims 6 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hatamura in view of Abels et al. Hatamura varies from the claims by not specifying that the signals control the vehicle's driving components based upon a continuous rated capacity. Abels et al shows a similar load monitoring system which maintains the loading within predescribed boundaries, see column 4, lines 9-20. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have the load detecting system of Hatamura by having its loading compared with predescribed boundaries, as to have it maintained within safe limits depending upon its current use, as taught by Abels et al.

5. Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hatamura in view of Miyasaki. Miyasaki shows a similar a similar load measuring system and teaches placing the a microprocessor (41 or 54) at the pin. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the load sensing system of Hatamura by providing the sensor pins with internal microprocessors, for increased accuracy, as taught by Miyasaki.

6. Claims 2-5, 8, 9, 16-19, 22 and 23 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

7. An inquiry concerning this action should be directed to Examiner Thomas J. Brahan at telephone number (703) 308-2568 on Mondays through Fridays from 9:30-7:00 EST.
